- Faculty within the department should review their notes, lectures, and assessments so that they ensure the topics and wordings are understood by all students reading them. For example, references that are only known to Americans or individuals with specific experiences must be rewritten.
 - Clubs, faculty and other events where students see underrepresented groups better represented. For example, faculty that serve as role models. Students need to see clubs where individuals like themselves are participating in activities that they are interested in.
 - More tutors for a larger set of courses and better outreach to attract students to the tutoring center. In addition, catching students before they are too far behind in their class(es).
